

THE MOMENT

(a monologue)

by

Matthew Weaver

10024 N. Colfax Road, Apt. 22
Spokane, WA 99218
509-760-8890
WeaverRMattthew@gmail.com

Cast

TYLER

Male, 18-20

Synopsis

Tyler was just sitting there, watching "The Bachelor" with his friend...

A blank stage.

Enter TYLER, male, 18 to 20.

TYLER

We were sitting on the couch. Watching “The Bachelor” or something like that. One of those shows.

Not really my kind of thing, but she likes it, and I like her to like what she likes and I like to be around her while she’s liking it.

And the Bachelor guy, he had thrown out this season’s girl who’s the one everyone hates when she suddenly muted the TV, looked over at me, turned it off and then was up in my lap. Kissing me pretty hard.

We’d hung out but this was the first time for anything like that. Although, not gonna lie, I’d kinda been hoping for a while ...

Whatever her intensity level, I tried to match it. When she pulled back, I also leaned back. When she grabbed me ... well, I was there to be grabbed.

And then she’s getting my clothes off and we’re all over the couch now, naked and her butt is really cute and she’s got these really sexy knees - I never knew kneecaps could be sexy but there you go - and then she’s got me and she’s sitting on top of me and then ... I’m in her.

And we’re both breathing really hard and kissing and moaning and she says, “This is it. This is the moment everyone’s waiting for.”

She was right. She was so right.

And honestly, for a second or two I almost, like, left my body. Like it was happening to someone else and not to me, but then I thought, “Hey, damn it, this is your first time, you’d better be present for it,” and so I paid attention and was present and just ...

It was nice. Really, really nice.

I like her a lot. I think she likes me back. I hope so.

And the world is exactly the same. And at the same time, it’s completely different.

End of Play